"EVERY DAY SPEECH"

(An important rule for the reading of poetry is never to mispronounce words. Give them the sound they have in everyday speech, and let the blunder of a false rhyme, if there be one, rest on the author.-From "Peetry as a Spoken Art," by Amy Lowell, in The Dial.

Miss Lowell, ye in Brookline, Mass., Enunciate as clear as glass, But daily diction of The Bay Is not our speech of every day. The girls of Brooklyn and New York Employ a different kind of talk From what you hear in Chestnut Hill, Cohasset, Lynn, or Newtonville. For you might scorn the Brooklyn girl Who says she works for Standard Oil; Who says, in words that bite and burn, A club is what she'd like to join. I met that girl the other night. She said to me: "And so you write! "I love"-than she none e'er was glibber-

"This Amy Lowell's, now, verse libber." Ah, Brooklyn's speech of "every day" Is not the diction of Back Bay.

It may interest dialecticians to learn that the Earl Pearl Works are situated near Worth Street. An expert dialectician, by the way, should be able to tell a man's habitat after hearing him read the preceding sentence.

To many people the present world situation is not a complete surprise; an extraordinary proliferation of sentimental humanitarianism into every sphere of activity expressing itself in the face of a terrible industrial slavery and international economic competition of the most virulent sort, spelt catastrophe and cataclysmic disturbance in red letters even though the nature of the breakdown until July 31st, 1914, had not been and could not have been predicted with categorical definiteness. . . . A synchronous spreading of so-called scientific materialism was not therefore an unexpected phenomenon but it could not have been foreseen that the German Nation was to become the fountain source of this monstrous teaching; in this connection it is interesting to observe that the great philosopher Leibnitz successfully combated the materialism of his time and restabilitated in its purely metaphysical aspects Platonic-Aristotelianism; while admitting causality and pre-established harmony in the material world he rightly held that no system of ontology is complete without the teleological concept and which does not interpret the cosmos in terms of purposeful individual activity.-From a Stock Exchange concern's weekly review. But what A. T. wants to know is whether he should buy or sell.

WHITMAN URGES STATE REVENUE SEGREGATION

Backs California Plan for Convention to Check Federal Encroachment

Albany, Feb. 15 .- Governor Whitman sent a special message to the Legislature to-day, urging New York State to join California in furthering the movement for a national convention of state representatives to adopt and urge upon Congress a definite policy in the segregation of state and Federal revenue.

"During recent years," said the Govcronc, "Congress in its exercise of the taxing powers has been steadily encroaching upon sources of revenue not heretofore tapped by the Federal government. As one of those states which are sustaining the major part of the Federal tax burden, we must begin to view with serious concern the tenview with serious concern the ten-dency of Federal absorption of sources's of state revenue."
